

Northwest Division Introduces Dedicated Newly formed team to Enhance Safety in Historic Stockyards

Fort Worth, TX - In response to the increasing number of visitors to one of Texas's most iconic destinations, the historic Stockyards, the Northwest Division of the Fort Worth Police Department is proud to announce the introduction of a dedicated newly formed team.

Recognizing the importance of providing a welcoming atmosphere and ensuring the safety of both residents and tourists, the Northwest Division collaborated closely with officers and command staff to address the growing need for enhanced police presence in the area.

The newly dedicated team comprises of officers who have recently undergone specialized bike certification training. These officers have volunteered to adjust their schedules and focus their efforts on patrolling the Stockyards, supplementing existing patrol teams.

While prioritizing patrol staffing remains paramount, the implementation of the newly formed team allows for a more dynamic approach to policing, ensuring that officers can effectively address the unique challenges and opportunities presented by the Stockyards' vibrant environment.

To further enhance the effectiveness of the newly formed team, weekly meetings will be held to evaluate performance and adjust strategies as necessary. Additionally, the public is encouraged to provide feedback and suggestions to help tailor the initiative to the specific needs of the community.

"We view this as an exciting opportunity to not only enhance safety but also to foster stronger connections with the community. Together, we can make the Stockyards a safer, more welcoming place for everyone" added Northwest Division Commander J. Kim.
